

Lauro

As for the course itself at Lauro Golf, it is a relatively flat parkland course and each of the original eighteen holes are named after famous bullfighters. A lot of the fairways are narrow and driving accuracy is important, particularly as there are also numerous water hazards and large bunkers to negotiate. The greens are level and true and will normally be found in good condition. The holes are a good mixture of varying lengths and the par 3's are a good test. You cannot help enjoy the course and if you are not playing well simply admire the views! The recent nine holes have added a new dimension to the whole layout and has given the complex that little bit more style and credibility.

This was an area of peace and tranquillity but unfortunately like many parts of the Costa del Sol housing developments are taking over. However, Lauro still offers a magnificent setting and a golf complex of note that can be enjoyed by all. It is popular and busy with visitors and you should therefore let Med Golf secure your tee time to avoid disappointment.

On arrival you will find ample parking and a pro shop where tuition can be arranged if required. The course can be walked but it is advisable to take advantage of the buggies on offer particularly in the warmer months.

When you visit Lauro, you should take time to enjoy the clubhouse, which is a restored country farmhouse and over 200 years old. It is unique and possibly the most unusual clubhouse you will ever come across. Enjoy a meal on the terrace and take in the atmosphere the surroundings generate. It is all so peaceful.
